Bridgetown Apr. 1. 89.

Dear Sir. I send enclosed.
Fac simile of Hole I have in my possession.
have made a rough sketch but think you will be able to make it out
The original is in perfect condition all except the inscription on the top and bottom which is somewhat worn but could be easily made out by the aid of a strong glass. what I want to know is what is its value. I consider it worth its face. but being among the first notes issued after the Declaration of Independance Thinks it worth consider able as a curiosity I have had it in my pos session for a number of years having previously been the property of my Grandfather who came to this country at that time by kindly reply ing to this and refer ing me to parties who would be interested in this curious old note

I remain yours.

Please find enclosed fac simile of Note I have in my possession. Have made a rough sketch but think you will be able to make it out. The original is in perfect condition all except the inscription on the top and bottom which is somewhat worn but could be easily made out by the aid of a strong glass. What I want to know is what is its value. I consider it worth its face, but being among the final notes issued after the Declaration of Independence think it worth considerable as curiosity. I have had it in my possession for a number of years, having previously been the property of my Grandfather who came to this country at that time by kindly replying to this and referring me to parties who would be interested in this curious old note.

I remain yours,
Respectfully,
